

DON'T BLAME THE CHEF!

Monday, May 21, 2018

Corfu, NY

It's utter gourmet-hem as old Italian Master Chef Luigi Mancheezi wants to share his love of cooking with the world. But his sous chef, Stella Mandella, is trying to force him to retire by sabotaging his famous recipes so she can take over his bistro. She consults with the deceased French Chef, Pierre Monchere – now nothing more than a magically floating head – to plan her coup. There's course after course of hilarity as Stella plots and Luigi tries to figure out which audience member is secretly a food critic. In addition to your full-course gourmet luncheon, the comedy – and the meal – come to a delicious ending, including the first-ever sharing of Luigi's famous "secret ingredient." A must-see show for lovers of fast-paced comedy and great food!

Lunch today includes non-alcoholic White Peach-Grape Cocktail, "Yorkshire Salad", individual mini-loaves of Homemade Pumpkin Bread, succulent Roasted Pork Loin Medallions (bathed in a tantalizing Colonial Fruit Sauce), South Carolina Cheddar Rice Pilaf, Buttered Broccoli, Homemade Cappuccino Fudge Cake, Dunkin Donuts Coffee and a variety of Boston Tea Party Gourmet Tea Selections!

Before departing, shop their "Boston Tea Party Tea Treasures Table" featuring gourmet teas and beautiful gifts.

After leaving the show, drive through the rolling hills of the southern tier on your way to The Country Cottage. Nestled on five acres, this enchanting wonderland is chock-full of unique gifts and handmade decorative items. At last count, there were about 200 varieties of goods for sale from dozens of artisans. They range from exquisite, seasonal dried flower arrangements and gourds, to exotically scented soaps such as Thai-pear or wisteria, and lamps, candles, essential oils, garden décor, and more. This haven of homey delights has become a destination spot for treasure hunters who like Colonial American crafts and urban warriors in need of a little respite and fresh air.
